

Food and music? I'm feelin' good!

Opening a new restaurant is like having a new addition to your family.

Bobby Sinaroy has always loved to make people feel good. Even when he was a child it was about others.

Today he is the proud owner of Momo's Bistro on The Queensway. This is one place that is the bright light of sunshine and vibrancy; it's actually hopping.

The food is a combination of Global & Mediterranean cuisine and down-home cooking.

We started our journey with Kalbi ribs. These are marinated short ribs in a Korean sauce. Ladies and gentlemen, hold on to your seat, we're flying.

If you love antipasto with personality, you'll love this delightful dish of grilled eggplant, fennel, prosciutto, marinated olives and parmesan. Louise, let go of the plate! We said that we'd share.

The beef Carpaccio is cured for 16 days and five different types of alcohol is used in the process.

THE MOVEABLE FEAST

THE FOOD GUYS: MARTY AND AVRUM

was such a hit that everyone kept asking for one more taste from my friend's plate. It's cooked with parmesan crust and a clear vinaigrette.

The rack of lamb is crusted with a port reduction and the lamb is fire-grilled.

You all know by now that I love my chicken — well, the stuffed chicken hits a home run with my palate. Imagine, it's stuffed with crushed cashews, goat cheese and — yes, my little chickadees — sun-dried tomatoes.

The Muscovy duck breast is a piece of art done to perfection. The seafood linguini is a rainbow of mussels, shrimps and lobster. That is one dish the chef, Jerome Bishop, is proud of.

The desserts here are all homemade and deserve a gold medal. The Louisiana bread pudding has the charm of New Orleans. The tiramisu is pure pleasure and temptation.

The banana foster is a tribute with a taste you will love.

If that's not enough, then the five-dollar martini is on Thursdays.

By the way, this restaurant is more than wonderful food. It is also about the live music from Wednesday to Saturday.

Momo's features jazz and R&B, and Wednesday night is an open mike night.

My visit here seemed to go so fast, that I didn't want the night to end. I looked over at Bobby and he smiled. He was living the dream and making others feel great — this is what he does best.
